

COLLEGE OF HUMANITIES & SOCIAL SCIENCES

HUMANITIES CENTER GRADUATE COURSE-BASED MINI-RESIDENCY PROGRAM

RITA FELSKI

John Stewart Bryan Professor of English, University of Virginia

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 15, 2024 | 12:00 PM

GRAD STUDENT WORKSHOP: "AN INTRODUCTION TO PUBLISHING JOURNAL ARTICLES"

Hodges Hall Room 155 - Free and open to all HSS graduate students

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 15, 2024 | 4:00 PM

PUBLIC LECTURE: "ON RESONANCE"

French House Grand Salon - Free and open to the public

Rita Felski, John Stewart Bryan Professor in the Department of English at the University of Virginia, will deliver a public lecture and graduate student consultations as part of the HSS Humanities Center Graduate Course-Based Mini-Residency Program, hosted by Gundela Hachmann, LSU Department of World Languages, Literatures & Culture, and the students of CPLT 7010.

An author of multiple books on literary theory, and the former editor of New Literary History, Professor Felski's research centers on aesthetics, method, and interpretation. The Limits of Critique (Chicago UP, 2015), treating the role of suspicion in literary criticism, was widely reviewed and lauded, and she explores similar issues in Critique and Postcritique, co-edited with Elizabeth Anker (Duke UP, 2017). Hooked: Art and Attachement (Chicago UP, 2020) asks how and why we get stuck to works of art.